

"Man is often faced with a choice: which way to go, what do you want to become? If – for example – the little Stalin would have paid more attention to the world around him, perhaps he could not have devoted his creative energy to killing, but to create a start-up (or something like that). It could be a more fancy thing and serves humanity much better. Also in 2022. Gori, for example, would have been perfectly suited to start the world's largest software company here."
