

A DIFFERENT GOAL | DIALOGUE LIST

« The question of unfriendly AI mobilizes, because many of those interested in it want proof that our goals and those of the machines will always be shared; but things need to go wrong only once, a single little mutation, for everything to change; we don't even have to imagine unfriendly goals that are severely hostile, just a different goal. For example, the fact that machines start liking chairs, and suddenly decide to fill the whole universe with chairs, is enough for us to be definitely blocked, and left on the sidelines. »